

Children Help Boost RNLI Funds

Pirates, sailors, fish, mermaids and sharks have been spotted in our classrooms and corridors.

The maritime guests were not unwelcome aquatic invaders – but pupils raising money for the RNLI SOS charity campaign. As part of a non-uniform day, the children dressed up as something to do with the sea – and with a lot of effort and imagination from families and friends, the school was treated to some colourful and creative costumes.

Head teacher Kath Barham said: “This year’s RNLI SOS day raised £260 for the charity which is a bigger total than last year’s effort.

“Water safety awareness is vital for our children as we live by the seaside and many of them visit the seaside throughout the year. The RNLI does a fantastic job and we are always happy to have a special day to acknowledge their work and raise some money for the charity to help keep the service afloat.”

The school enjoys regular visits from the RNLI whose crew explain about their water safety work and rescue missions.
